Painting

Now the husband paints the fence, while the housewife paints her face, and, with energy intense, we are painting, every place. We enjoy this useful toil, which will make the town more fair, and we smell of linseed oil, and there's other in our hair. Paint would beautify the spheres, and we have no useless sighs if there's putty in our ears and some varnish in our eyes. Wherever brush is laid, an improvement then is seen, and no odds about the shade—lilac, lavender or green. You will say, "I am surprised that you preach paint evermore; you have sure been subsidized by some paint and varnish store." But I haven't had a yen from the dealers in red lead since I started urging men to embellish house and shed. Some men tell you how to pray, but I'm wearing out my throat shrieking, "Paint Up!" all the day. It's because I hope to make this old world a brighter place that I urge you till I break both suspenders and a trace. Blow yourself for lead and zinc, or your residence will spoil; paint it blue with stripes of pink!

Justice Wendell P. Stafford resumed today his judicial duties on the bench of the District Supreme Court. Justice Stafford appears to have been greatly benefited by his sojourn at the seashore.

WILL OBSERVE SUN SPOTS.

Dr. C. G. Abbott of Smithsonian Institution Goes to California.

Dr. C. G. Abbott of the Smithsonian Institution and Mrs. Abbott have left for the Mount Wilson Observatory in California where Dr. Abbott will continue his solar observations during the coming summer. Dr. Abbott has been engaged on the observations of sun spots for the Smithsonian for many years past. During the past three years simultaneous observations of this sort have been carried on at Mount Wilson Observatory, at Washington and at a special station established in North Africa.

One result of these observations has been to determine to the satisfaction of astronomers the fact that the sun is a variable star. It has both a variation extending through a few days and a probable greater variation extending over a term of years. The observations have not been carried on long enough to determine the character of this longer period of variation.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING SHOULD BEGIN IN HOME

View Expressed by Prof. Blumenthal in Address to Parents and Others.

That the schools are not fitting the child for the economic necessities of today and that the same curriculum is now in force throughout the educational systems of the United States as were in force during the time of our grandfathers were declarations made by Prof. Gustave A. Blumenthal, director and analyst of the vocational guidance bureau, before the parents and friends of pupils of the O Street Vocational School last evening.

Not Always Effective.

As things now stand, the speaker said, the vocational suits the industrial conditions, but it does not always suit the boy, and until the boy is fitted for the trade by proper guidance beginning at home, he cannot be expected to follow the course of his special fitness.

Prof. Blumenthal paid high tribute to the work of the O Street Vocational School, and said that the O Street Bulletin, the paper published by the school, is not only the first one to come from the vocational schools of this city, but that it is the only one to be published by any vocational school in the country.

President Henry P. Blair of the board of education spoke of the school, and said, he said, by actually living with the child in the full meaning of the word, if the parent fails in this, Mr. Blair said, the child cannot be equally balanced in the things which ought to be his in this life. He is bound to be one-sided. Vocational education, he said, is a means to economic independence, but that if the home did not shoulder its responsibility such an education would be valueless to a community.

Commends Systems of Europe.

Assistant Superintendent R. C. Bruce paid tribute to the European countries for more than one element of vocational ideas. Many in this country, he said, are pursuing occupations which offer no development whatever, especially as far as wages are concerned. "We must have a large number of men and women of the middle class," he said, "who are to be trained in vocational work and who are to take their places in the industries of this and other communities. It is not enough that we should receive particular training, but students in the trade schools must also receive a thorough cultural training which would bring a success beyond measure to their trade work."

John Dolph, president of the vocational guidance bureau, said that the practical course of life, vocational education, he said, teaches the boy and girl to be practical. Trade training, he said, solves the problem of work, the problem of culture, confronts all who are struggling for existence in this life.

Invokes Congressional Aid.

Principal J. Moria Saunders in his opening remarks made appeal for more liberal appropriations from Congress for vocational work. He also told of practical work which had been done at the school, resulting in a saving of expense to the board of education and the District. He stated that the activities of the school had not been confined within the building, but that a community interest had been established.

Rev. M. W. Clair offered invocation. A mandolin solo was played by Miss Katherine Davidge and a vocal solo was contributed by Miss Virginia Williams. After the meeting closed those in the audience inspected the work of the departments of millinery, sewing and dressmaking, printing, carpentry and housebuilding.

TO EXTEND COMMERCIAL "FIRING LINE" OF U. S.

National Foreign Trade Convention Names Council for Development.

The national foreign trade convention, which was in session Wednesday and Thursday at the Raleigh Hotel, adjourned late yesterday, after a call upon President Wilson and the adoption of a series of resolutions designed to carry out the purpose of the manufacturers and exporters to extend the commercial "firing line" all around the world by "getting together."

The convention decided to create a national foreign trade council of its members, to be appointed by the president of the convention, Alva B. Johnson, president of the Baldwin locomotive works, of Philadelphia. This council is to co-ordinate the industrial, commercial, transportation and financial interests of the nation for the extension of foreign trade, and the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will be sought.

It is intended through this body to work for the development of a truly national foreign trade policy, to defend existing commerce against the highly energized campaigns of European and Asiatic industrial nations.

List of Resolutions Adopted.

The convention adopted resolutions: Urging Congress to put American industry on an equal footing with foreign competitors by permitting combinations for foreign, as distinct from domestic commerce.

Pledging the convention's support to measures necessary to increase the efficiency of the consular and diplomatic services.

Indorsing increased appropriations for the trade promotion functions of the Department of Commerce and the establishment of commercial attaches.

Indorsing the manufacturing census ordered to be taken in 1914 and urging manufacturers to co-operate.

Favoring the upbuilding of an American merchant marine.

Urging the President to negotiate reciprocity treaties for the extension of foreign trade.

PULMOTOR SAVES A BOY WHEN FIRST-AID FAILS

Warren Sadler Falls Into Eastern Branch—Rescued by O. W. Klueh and Restored to Hospital.

Warren Sadler, sixteen years old, a resident of Cottage Hill, narrowly escaped drowning in the Eastern branch, near Benning bridge, last night about 8:30 o'clock. He probably would have been drowned had it not been for the prompt work of Oscar W. Klueh of 1324 Neal street northeast and subsequent use of the pulmotor by physicians at Casualty Hospital.

Sadler and a number of companions were playing on a scow near Miller's boat house, a short distance north of the bridge, while on the bridge a number of men were casting their lines in an effort to land a few fish.

Klueh was more than one hundred yards from the scow when he heard Sadler's companions shouting for help, and, running to the scene of the accident, the young man quickly jumped overboard.

Klueh's Prompt Service.

There was about twelve feet of water where the accident happened, it is stated, but Klueh was able to find Sadler without delay and pull him from the water.

He resorted to first-aid treatment in an effort to restore consciousness, and Sadler was carried to 15th and H streets northeast, a distance of more than a mile, by Klueh and others.

An ambulance from Casualty Hospital arrived in an effort to restore consciousness, and Sadler was quickly resuscitated. He was able to go home today.
